

Momentum begins

The magazine of the National MS Society isn't InsideMS anymore. We've changed more than the name. We've created special sections, each marked by a special color, to help readers select the stories that mean the most to them. MS is vastly changeable, different from person to person, and different at different times in life. And yet everyone affected by it shares a common need to move ahead. Thus Momentum is a menu.

We are now a quarterly magazine, with more information for more people ...

In News Feed, you'll find reports about current events, from federal policy changes to new Society initiatives. The Cover Story may be, as in this issue, several stories on a single theme. Or it may be one long look at a topic. Either way, we promise more probing central articles—and we hope you, the readers, will suggest topics of top interest. Our Space focuses on life as lived by people under 30. Healthy Living is for everyone. In each issue, it will review options from diet to humor and include an in-depth look at a common MS symptom. MS Progressed will house articles of interest to those who face the losses incurred by progressive disease. Money Matters range from taxes to benefit programs, from insurance to employment issues. We'll also include a personal look at a donor who has made supporting the MS movement a personal cause. And finally, Research Now presents eight information-packed pages about what research is doing now to improve care and treatment—and to find the cures that will prevent MS, stop it from causing damage, or repair what it has done.

That's not all!

This December, Momentum will debut in an audio format. Even in the larger type we used to use, everyone with vision loss was not well served by our printed publication. Momentum Audio will remedy that. Look for it on our Web site in December.
